Runnemede, page 271.

Hardy, Captain George, Jr. of Hardy's Bluff, Isle of Wight County, Virginia, 1633-1695; came from Bristol, England to Virginia, prior to 1654, at the request of his uncle, George Hardy, Sr., who had come to the Colony before 1636. He was a staunch and liberal churchman and represented Isle of Wight in the House of Burgesses, 1641, 44, 45, 49 and 52. He accumulated a large estate in Isle of Wight and Surry Counties and owned the famous Hardy Mill on Lawne's Creek. By his will dated March 16, 1654 and probated April 14, 1655, he left the major portion of his estate to his nephew and namesake, George Hardy, Jr.

Capt. George Hardy, Jr., added to his inheritance, being a successful planter and shipbuilder. He was a staunch churchman, serving as a vestryman for old St. Lukes. He was a Captain in the Isle of Wight militia, November 20, 1654. He married Mary, the daughter of Richard Jackson and his wife, Alice Bennett.

Captain Hardy was the son of John Hardy, of Bedfordshire, England, 1613-1670 and his wife Olive Council, 1615-1675. About the year 1666, John Hardy and his wife followed their children already in Virginia, patenting land in Isle of Wight and Surry Counties.

The above proves that John Pitt's wife was the Olive named in the will of John Hardy, who died in 1677 and that she was born in 1648. The Visitation gives the first John Hardy's birth of the chart as 1613. If Olive were the first child that leaves only a space of 55 years to have been a grandfather, which raises a question.

I have always felt that the two Johns were one and the same man, who had married again.

Olive Hardy, born 1648, married first Giles Driver, 8 children.
